The Division of Gastroenterology at Massachusetts General Hospital welcomes applications from qualified individuals for a clinical position in our Inflammatory Bowel Diseases program. The MGH GI Division is at the forefront of clinical care, fellowship training, and investigation in gastroenterology and hepatology. Successful candidates will possess strong consultative and endoscopic skills in both the outpatient and inpatient settings and the ability to work collaboratively. Applicants must be committed to teaching as a requirement for this position and demonstrated success in the supervision and education of trainees is desirable. Candidates must possess proficiency in the management of IBD and must be board certified in gastroenterology. An Advanced Inflammatory Bowel Disease fellowship training is desired but not required. Initial appointment can be at the Instructor, Assistant, or Associate Professor level at Harvard Medical School commensurate with qualifications, and in the Gastroenterology Division, MGH. Affirmative Action /Equal Opportunity Employer. Inquiries by women and underrepresented minority applicants are encouraged.

Please submit CV or inquiries to:

Ashwin Ananthakrishnan, MD
Gastroenterology Search Committee
Massachusetts General Hospital
Division of Gastroenterology
55 Fruit Street, Wang 5
Boston, MA 02114
or via email to lgurska@mgh.harvard.edu

We are an equal opportunity employer and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, gender identity, sexual orientation, pregnancy and pregnancy-related conditions or any other characteristic protected by law.