Instructor / Assistant Professor in the field of autism or a related research area.

Applications are invited for multiple full-time positions at the level of Research Staff at the Lurie Center for Autism at Massachusetts General Hospital and as Instructor or Assistant Professor in an appropriate department (pediatrics, neurology, psychiatry, radiology, etc.) at Harvard Medical School.

Candidates with basic science, translational science, or clinical research experience are encouraged to apply provided that the research experience or future research directions are applicable to autism spectrum disorder (ASD). Specific areas include, but are not limited to, neuroinflammation, neural plasticity, communication and language, and biomarker development. Applicants can hold a PhD and/or MD in any given relevant specialty but must have a solid track record in conducting independent and innovative research during their graduate and/or post-doctoral fellow training. Candidates for the rank of Assistant Professor must also exhibit, through their accomplishments, promise of future distinction in research, scholarship, and education.

The successful candidate is expected to establish an extramurally funded, independent research program, working collaboratively with other investigators at the Lurie Center, and elsewhere at MGH, Harvard and MIT.

During your employment as Instructor or Assistant Professor you will be asked to participate in administrative and teaching duties.

We are equal opportunity employers and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, gender identity, sexual orientation, pregnancy and pregnancy-related conditions or any other characteristic protected by law.

Applicants should email the following: a letter of interest, a CV and three letters of reference on official letterhead with signature to Jacob Hooker, PhD; e/o Ann Giauque, AGIAUQUE@PARTNERS.ORG, Lurie Center for Autism, 1 Maguire Road, Lexington, MA 02421.