

Brigham and Women's Hospital is seeking candidates for the position of Clinical Director, Allergy and Clinical Immunology. The ideal candidate will be a visionary leader who will lead a world-class academic program, is nationally recognized for his/her experience and accomplishments in clinical care, teaching and research, and has previous leadership experience. This candidate will also possess experience in implementing quality initiatives, as well as clinical protocols. Board certification in Allergy/Immunology and eligibility for licensure in Massachusetts are required. The successful applicant will also be nominated for a faculty appointment at a rank commensurate with academic accomplishments at the Harvard Medical School, one of the nation's leading Universities. Brigham and Women's Hospital physicians enjoy a collegial work environment within the framework of a large academic group practice, a competitive salary enhanced by a very attractive benefits package, and the opportunity to live in one of the nation's great cities.

Candidates should be willing to practice both at a nearby satellite location and onsite. The successful candidate will also engage in teaching medical students, fellows in the clinic and inpatient settings.

Academic rank as Instructor, Assistant Professor or Associate Professor at Harvard Medical School will be commensurate with experience and qualification.
