BRIGHAM AND WOMEN’S HEALTH CARE (BWHC) in Boston, Massachusetts invites applications for the position of Director of the Pain Research Center within the Department of Anesthesiology, Perioperative and Pain Medicine (DAPPM). Candidates with an international reputation in pain research will join a department with prominent research programs in inflammation, nanomedicine, cardiac genomics and obstetric anesthesia.

Successful candidates will carry out research focused on inflammation, cancer pain and post-operative pain, with a commitment to develop translational bridges to clinical research and care. Candidates should have a history of successful extramural funding, have a solid commitment to basic and translation research in pain, and should also be exemplary teachers. It is expected that candidates have an MD and/or PhD degree and be Board Eligible or Board Certified, and they must provide evidence of continuing medical education and meet the metrics for an academic appointment with Harvard Medical School at the level of associate professor or professor.

We are an equal opportunity employer and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, gender identity, sexual orientation, pregnancy and pregnancy-related conditions or any other characteristic protected by law.

Qualified individuals should submit a cover letter and curriculum vitae to Alice Rocchi at arocchi1@bwh.harvard.edu

The names of three references and requested materials should be addressed to James P. Rathmell, M.D., Search Committee.