Melanoma Physician

The department of Medical Oncology at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and the Department of Medicine, Brigham and Women's Hospital, announce a search for a physician at the Instructor or Assistant Professor level to join the Melanoma Program. The successful candidate will participate in an active clinical practice that is fully integrated within a large and growing clinical and translational research program. Interest and expertise in the conduct of clinical trials is desired. This is a full-time clinical position but there may be an opportunity to become a clinical investigator in the future. The successful candidate will also engage in teaching medical students, house staff and oncology fellows in the clinic and inpatient settings.

The academic appointment will be at the Instructor or Assistant Professor level at Harvard Medical School and determined by the applicant's credentials. Salary and benefits will be competitive with other institutions. Applicants should have an MD or MD/PhD degree and should be board certified or board eligible in Internal Medicine and Medical Oncology.

Interested candidates should submit a letter of interest by email along with their CV and the names and email addresses of three references to:
