DANA-FARBER CANCER INSTITUTE

Dedicated to Discovery...Committed to Care

Bone Marrow Transplantation Physician

The Department of Medical Oncology at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and the Department of Medicine, Brigham and Women's Hospital, announce a search for a physician at the Assistant or Associate Professor level to join the Adult Stem Cell Transplant and Cellular Therapies Program. The successful candidate will participate in a very active clinical practice that is fully integrated within a large and growing clinical and translational research program, and has interest, expertise and experience in the conduct of clinical trials or outcomes research. The successful candidate will engage in robust clinical service, clinical investigation and teaching medical students, house staff, and hematology/oncology fellows in the outpatient clinic and inpatient settings. Academic rank of Assistant or Associate Professor at Harvard Medical School will be commensurate with experience, training, and academic achievements.

Applicants should have an M.D. or M.D./Ph.D., with ABIM certification and should have or be eligible for ABIM subspecialty certification in medical oncology and/or hematology.

Applicants should submit a letter of interest, CV, and the names and email addresses of four references to:
