

MGH Seeking Primary Care Unit Chief Physician at MGH Charlestown HealthCare Center

The Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH) Division of General Internal Medicine seeks an outstanding primary care physician practice leader to join our faculty at the MGH Charlestown HealthCare Center. We seek physicians of diverse backgrounds who are excited to engage in the clinical, educational, and scholarly missions of our Division at MGH, and are charged with the mission of providing patient care and teaching at MGH, including the training of Harvard Medical School students. Academic rank at Harvard Medical School as Instructor, Assistant Professor, or Associate Professor, full-time and part-time will be commensurate with qualifications and experience, including relevant experience in medical education, health system leadership, research, and community service.

Candidates must be board certified or board eligible in Internal Medicine or Family Medicine, and qualify for a license to practice medicine in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Applicants must have at least 5 years experience as a primary care provider.

Position located in Charlestown, MA.

Please send letter of interest and CV to:

Mary McNaughton-Collins, MD, MPH
Director of Faculty Recruitment and of Faculty Career and Professional Development
Division of General Internal Medicine
Massachusetts General Hospital
C/O Virginia Manzella
VMANZELLA@PARTNERS.ORG

We are an Equal Opportunity Employer and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, gender identity, sexual orientation, pregnancy and pregnancy-related conditions, or any other characteristic protected by law.