

Division of Women's Health | Brigham and Women's Hospital

Primary Care and Pregnancy Transitions Care

The Division of Women's Health (DWH) at Brigham Women's Hospital invites applications for a full-time internal medicine clinician to provide primary care and coordinated postpartum and interpregnancy care.

The DWH is establishing a new Postpartum Transitions and Interpregnancy Care Clinic: the Postpartum Transitions Clinic will support the transition from OB back to primary care, ensuring consistency of care and appropriate follow-up for patients with medical complications; the Interpregnancy Care Clinic will provide consultations to patients with complex medical issues who are considering conceiving, and to patients between pregnancies to optimize their medical health to ensure healthy pregnancies. The successful candidate will devote approximately 2-3 sessions/week to these clinics and their remaining effort to primary care sessions as well as teaching activities.

Applicants should possess an MD, board certification in internal medicine, and a strong record of clinical and teaching experience to join our interdisciplinary team. Applicants should have experience in providing internal medicine care to pregnant and postpartum patients, ideally through advanced training.

The successful candidate will receive an academic appointment at Harvard Medical School (HMS) as an Instructor or Assistant Professor rank will be based on previous experience and scholarship. A minimum of 50 hours of teaching per academic year is required to maintain an academic appointment at HMS. Compensation is competitive and will be commensurate with educational background, experience, scholarship and career goals. Applicants should currently hold or be able to obtain all necessary state and federal medical licensure and certifications prior to start date.

Interested applicants should submit a letter of interest, CV, and three references (name, institution, and contact information) to Alexandra Harreys, Division of Women's Health, BWH, at aharreys@bwh.harvard.edu.

We are an equal opportunity employer and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, gender identity, sexual orientation, pregnancy and pregnancy-related conditions or any other characteristic protected by law.