

Genitourinary Oncologist

The division of Medical Oncology, Department of Medicine at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center (BIDMC) a 673-bed major teaching hospital of Harvard Medical School is seeking to hire a Genitourinary Oncologist at the Instructor level to join an expanding faculty practice. The position will be based at the Boston Campus of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center with a full-time academic appointment at Harvard Medical School. The successful candidate will participate in a robust training program of residents and fellows and assume an integral role in the development of clinical and translational research.

Requirements:

Successful applicants will be fully trained and Board certified or eligible in Internal Medicine and Genitourinary Oncology and interested in developing a career in academic GU with a focus on clinical care and education.

To learn more or apply, please visit: <http://www.hmphysicians.org/careers/> or contact Myrna Campbell, Administrative Supervisor at mmecampbe@bidmmc.harvard.edu

We are an equal opportunity employer and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, gender identity, sexual orientation, pregnancy and pregnancy-related conditions or any other characteristic protected by law.